Both the idea of God and the person of God are logical. Believing in the existence of God will explain many of the philosophical questions that people have as well as some of the mysteries of the universe. Logically, think of the concept of time—it had to begin at some point. God exists outside of time, so He is the creator of time and space.

Is God logical? - CompellingTruth.org

Gödel's ontological proof is a formal argument by the mathematician Kurt Gödel for the existence of God. The argument is in a line of development that goes back to Anselm of Canterbury. St. Anselm's ontological argument, in its most succinct form, is as follows: "God, by definition, is that for which no greater can be conceived. God exists in the understanding. If God exists in the understanding, we could imagine Him to be greater by existing in reality. Therefore, God must exist." A more ...

I'll update my review, but if you want a logical outline of why The Bible is pre-scientific mythology, full of contradictory messages and how "god" is both cruel and imperfect (by the bible's own words) and how prayer does nothing, this is your book.

How God Works: A Skeptic Questions Belief by Marshall Brain

God is not logical because logic is for the finite and the fallible. It is a structure created and given by God so that beings with limited knowledge could solve problems and have a reasonable world. Logic is a framework for understanding created beings and their doings, but God is not created. He is not finite.
