~~The Whitsun Weddings by Philip Larkin | Poetry Foundation~~

Philip Larkin was what was known as a poet of the Movement. His poetry and poems, such as The Whitsun Weddings, was written in such a way that it reflected the lack of importance of Britain in a post-war world, and also echoed the changes that Britain was going through. The shift from a mostly-rural to a mostly-urban economy was also something that Larkin touched upon, as well as the idea of Britain being a little bit outdated in terms of technology and innovation.

~~Analysis of The Whitsun Weddings by Philip Larkin~~

Perfectly capturing mood and manner of weddings, the routine and the cycle of life, Larkin in fact uses the image of travelling by rail as a subtle motif for the journey through life, the Whitsun Weddings being a stop through which many (a dozen couples in this poem) proceed on their way to lives that will be lived out in 'London spread out like the sun / Its postal districts packed like squares of wheat.'

By Joshua Weiner. © The British Library Board FG1891-2.31. Although Philip Larkin turned down the office of Britain's poet laureate following the death of John Betjeman in 1984 (it ended up going to Ted Hughes), Larkin had already inherited Betjeman's cultural place in Britain and was one of the country's most popular poets. Three of his poems, including "The Whitsun Weddings," appear in The Nation's Favourite Poems (BBC, 1996), an anthology of the 100 most popular poems in the ...

The Whitsun Weddings. That Whitsun, I was late getting away: Not till about One-twenty on the sunlit Saturday Did my three-quarters-empty train pull out, All windows down, all cushions hot, all sense Of being in a hurry gone. We ran Behind the backs of houses, crossed a street Of blinding windscreens, smelt the fish-dock; thence

'The Whitsun Weddings' is usually regarded as one of Philip Larkin's brighter poems: a beautiful evocation of romantic love, with newlyweds riding the train to London against a backdrop of town and country scenes. The visual detail is gorgeous, like a succession of paintings by Constable, Lowry and Beryl Cook.
