Milo and the Magical Stones is a precious book about mice and the island they live on. One day Milo finds something extraordinary—a shiny stone! The stone brings the mice light in the winter, and soon each mouse wants a stone of their own. The wisest mouse reminds them that when they take something they must give something in return.

First of all, this book is written by the author of The Rainbow Fish and has the same shiny illustrations.

The magical stones glow and sparkle in the book. Another reason I really enjoyed this book was the choice of two endings. The author gave readers a choice of a happy ending or a sad ending.

about a mouse who finds a glowing stone that helps ward off the cold, dark days of winter, he adds an additional visual twist. At a pivotal point the remaining pages literally split in two horizontally, offering readers a choice between a "happy" and a "sad" ending. Pfister fans will definitely want to add this one to their collections.
