According to NPR, the carp in the bathtub tradition is likely rooted in a time of pre-refrigerator necessity, and the practice was a way to keep the carp fresh before it was time to cook it. It might also be a method for clearing mud from the carp's digestive track before cooking, but NPR spoke with a scientist who says it would probably take much longer than three days to be effective.

But getting from river (or carp farm) to table is not so simple. As the tradition goes, the Christmas carp must first swim in the family bathtub for at least a day or two before being killed, cleaned and prepared. Known as Wigilia supper, the meal is the biggest culinary event in the Polish calendar. Generations come together to proudly prepare the 12 course feast (one dish for each of the 12 apostles) and tradition has it you must try some of everything to ensure prosperity for each month ...
