Case Study: Industrial Archaeology. 'Industrial Archaeology' is a term which has developed a number of connotations since it was coined in the late 1950s. Its earliest concise definition was 'the archaeology of the first Industrial Revolution'. The term has since been extended to apply to an enthusiast-driven movement often focussed on recording and preserving machinery, mills and other hardware.

Impact of COVID-19 on the UK industrial heritage sector. The wider industrial heritage and industrial archaeology sector has been severely hit by the COVID-19 health crisis. Between the 23rd March and the end of June 2020 all the 600+ listed and scheduled industrial sites preserved as heritage attractions in England have been closed, as have the hundreds of protected industrial heritage sites in Scotland, Northern Ireland, and Wales normally open to the public.
